DEPARTMENT ADDS MAJOR CONCENTRATIONS
 The Department of Public History has added two new concentrations to its major this year, each of which develops the intellectual and professional level of students. Dr. Lawrence Caputo, director of the department, says, "The Public History concentration will give students the foundation they need to become outstanding practitioners of public history. Students are interested in regional, anthropological, and professional preparation, and the concentration emphasizes students with an interest in the field. Together, these concentrations are exciting new opportunities for our majors."

PROFESSORS DOCUMENT COVID-19 PANDEMIC
 This year, a team of professors from the Department of Public History and the Center for the Study of the South are working on a project to document the COVID-19 pandemic in Alabama. The project is a collaborative effort between the Department of Public History and the Center for the Study of the South. - # BE CONFIDENT. I KNOW ITS SCARY BUT YOU CAN DO IT! 😊

Nelson Mandela was a great leader who spent his life working for equality and justice in South Africa. He inspired the people of the world to work peacefully for a better life.

Mandela was born on January 18, 1918, in South Africa. He was named Nkhisano, which means "troublemaker" in the Xhosa language. His grandfather was the ruler of the Thembu people and his father was a local chief. Mandela was the first person in his family to attend school (his parents were both illiterate). He went to both college and law school.

He became involved in the African National Congress (ANC), a revolutionary group that fought apartheid (laws establishing racial separation and oppression in South Africa). He organized boycotts and strikes to fight for voting rights and equality for all South Africans.

In 1964, Mandela was sentenced to life in prison for fighting apartheid. After spending 27 years in prison, Mandela was released in 1990, the year apartheid was repealed. Mandela won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1993.

In 1994, South Africa held its first truly democratic, non-racial election and elected Nelson Mandela as its president. Mandela championed reconciliation, the peaceful resolution of grievances after decades of repressive racial laws. Without Mandela's guidance, South Africa might have slipped into a bloody civil war.

Nelson Mandela died on December 5, 2013, of the age of 95. He will be remembered as one of the greatest peace-makers and statesmen of all time.
