What fish are biting in the gulf of mexico Anyone getting anything at South jetty any flounder or popanos or something else Details: steel sailboat hull this will ruin your day if you hit it during low tide even at idle speed This is time to start looking for large mutton snapper in shallows off the beach. Anchor just off the first reef in 15-to-30 feet of water. Treasure CoastJul 6th, 2022Regular snapper fishing will be on fire! Mutton and the gray snappers are in their prime and will be big—really BIG! Treasure CoastJul 6th, 2022Offshore in the 120-to-180 foot of water range there is a great population of red snapper to be caught around the artificial wrecks and on some rock areas to the north of the Fort Pierce Inlet. Treasure CoastJul 6th, 2022Summer has arrived on the Treasure Coast Jun 1st, 2022School's out, lines in! While the children say goodbye to school for summer break, our favorite fish species will be ... Treasure Coast Jun 1st, 2022The seas are finally starting to calm down and that means summer fishing is here! This is my favorite time ... Treasure CoastJun 1st, 2022 This little redfish smacked the Z-Man Curly Tailz so hard we thought it was a much bigger fish! The best bite from Fort Pierce right now is offshore. The Mangrove snapper and Mutton snapper have been chewing. Live and cut bait is catching plenty of them along with most other bottom fish. The Dolphin bite is especially good and I think every boat in the area was chasing them this past Friday! I stayed inshore as I typically do and we caught a hodgepodge of mostly small fish. Though the trout bite was sluggish, other fish were eager. I can always tell when the hardhead catfish are nearing their spawn as they aggressively eat everything including our Z-Man three and four inch soft-plastics. The Minnowz and Diezel Minnowz were quite effective on all species this week; including a toothy barracuda and redfish hiding in the backend of a shallow cove. Friday morning Kim, my wife, joined me on a very short scouting trip. We headed into a deep sheltered cove bordered by residential housing on one side and mangrove jungle on the other. We caught very little, but saw lots of action as the last hour or so of the falling tide exposed many oyster bars. It's been a long time since I've seen this much mullet in one confined area. The chance of a fish finding your lure in the swarm of the real thing was small; very small indeed. The activity stopped almost like a switch being thrown to the off position once the sun raised enough to see the bottom features of the cove. I'll be going back when the tides are more favorable and I'm betting we slay them. This place was holding snook, tarpon and trout in good numbers and at least one large Bonnethead shark. I'd expect a redfish or two and maybe some flounder holding near the oyster mounds. I hope to report a successful return trip here soon! Catching BONEFISH while jigging for pompano! Happy New Year Gang! Sorry for the long absence, but up until recently fishing has been infrequent for me. Not only has "life" gotten in the way, but this odd weather has kept the bite very sporadic. Cold fronts are a regular factor in the winter months, however this unseasonable heat has kept our local water temps into the mid to upper seventy degree range; not a good scenario for a winter pattern. Pompano and sheepshead have been my favorite targets as of late. While the river pompano are still in a state of flux due to the flipflopping water temps the sheepshead are quite predictable. Find structure and you'll find the sheepshead this time of year! Hard structure holds sheepshead this time of year. and most of the fish we've caught are of keeper size. For pompano, Goofy-jigs tipped with fishbites or a standard three hook pompano surf-rig with fleas are working, though the hardheads and other bait stealing critters tend to abscond with too many of my hard earned fleas to spend a lot of time looking for them. I'll continue scouting the IRL and tossing the jig until the pompano show up in force! A couple of my favorite pompano spots near the inlet are holding numbers of bonefish... you heard me; bonefish! Kim (my wife) and I have caught quite a few "jigging" for pompano. How cool is that? Spanish Mackerel are here in good numbers. Cast small spoons, jigs or "Gotcha" lures at them from the jetties or troll small spoons and lipped plugs for them from your boat. There's plenty to go around once they show themselves. Lastly, target our remaining tarpon along with our winter resident spinner and blacktip sharks on afternoon outgoing tides. They're rolling and jumping across the mouth of the inlet when the current is strong. They're blasting the black mullet as they swim back and forth through the inlet. Once these mullet migrate south this pattern will weaken and become more and more sporadic. Large top-water popping plugs are excellent lures to entice a trophy!
